Jane Dennis paints the library's "Little Room"

Like a cocoon unraveling before their eyes, Tompkins County Public Library's youngest patrons watched with anticipation as the "Little Room" in the Youth Services Department was transformed into the room of their dreams.

"Inspiration for the mural came from children who use the library," said artist Jane Dennis, who surveyed young library users before deciding on the themes she painted.

Dennis, who worked at the library for 13 years before leaving in 1998 to concentrate on her art full-time, enlivened the "Little Room" by painting its once purple walls with colorful animals, flowers and celestial scenes. The mural was funded by a CAP II Community Artists Project grant from the Community Arts Partnership.

Artist Jane Dennis

The approximately 5-foot by 6-foot "Little Room" has long been a popular spot in the Youth Services Department, but, according to Bonnie Wojnowski, head of the department, Dennis's mural has only added to its appeal.

Dennis, who created the giant puppets seen in the Ithaca Festival Parade and Circus Eccentrithaca, said it took her longer than she had planned to complete the mural, but she wasn't bothered by her extended schedule.

"(The) unexpected fun of the mural was talking with the kids and parents, and I encouraged that interruption as much as possible," Dennis said. "I wanted the kids to comprehend some of the painting process. I pointed out my missteps so they could see that painting is just a matter of making many mistakes and continuing until you like what you have done."

And that is exactly what Dennis said she did. "I painted until I liked every part of the room...I like the plants on the ceiling growing out of the vent because I happily found a way to make the vent something humorous. I like each of the animals—they seem like old buddies to me now."

A reception recognizing Dennis and the Community Arts Partnership is planned for September 26 at 6 p.m., and a new name for the room will be unveiled that day. The name will be chosen from suggestions by young TCPL patrons.

The naming process is one more way to encourage creativity by youngsters, but Dennis is hopeful that her mural will help foster a creative spirit even after the room has a new name.

"I think the arts alter our perception of the world. Once our notion of what is 'normal' is thrown a little off balance we become more open to the creativity that each of us possesses," Dennis said. "Children are very creative and change in their environment may open little doors of possibility for them."

FROM THE DIRECTOR

We're hearing the sounds of construction again as the new Cayuga Green project takes shape next to us. The construction fences are up, old asphalt from the parking lot has been removed, and the lone tree in the middle of it all has been felled.

We've been through this before, as we watched the new parking garage rise on property behind the library. And we'll be able to watch the third phase of the Cayuga Green project in the spring from the Ezra Cornell Reading Room as condominiums are built on the last open space left, to the south of the library and next to the parking garage.

Nine years ago, the possibility of acquiring the Woolworth building required decision-makers to weigh the pros and cons of moving the library to this location. Keeping the library in the center of Tompkins County was a high priority. But some were worried that the new library would stand alone, surrounded by nothing but ugly surface parking lots and little pedestrian traffic. The future of downtown Ithaca seemed questionable.

But soon our library will be surrounded by new retail, office and living spaces. Parking is plentiful and a new movie complex will add to the mix. Anchoring one of the busiest intersections at the corner of Cayuga and Green Street, we are proud to be an integral part of this exciting development.

Trustee Profile — Marcy Rosenkrantz

Marcy Rosenkrantz

Marcy Rosenkrantz has always loved the library and had been a patron for years when she was nominated to the Board of Trustees in 2003. Dr. Rosenkrantz accepted because she wanted to make a difference, and has since been an active member of the policy and services and technology committees.

Marcy moved to Lansing with her husband, Dan, 13½ years ago from Lancaster, California, when she was offered the position of Associate Director for Supercomputing Technologies at the Cornell Theory Center in 1993. Most recently, she served as Director of Library Systems at the Cornell University Library, retiring at the end of 2006.

“Since retiring, I’ve been spending most of my time quilting and helping my husband on our farm in Lansing.” When asked about her reading preferences, Marcy said she borrows and listens to books on CD while mowing the fields, exercising, planting and quilting.

Marcy recently began volunteering at the Friends of the Library, helping pre-sort books and working as a cashier during the Spring booksale. “I love cookbooks, quilting books and magazines, most of which I buy at the Friends’ booksale.

Marcy’s work with the Tompkins County Public Library has led her to comment, “The greatest challenge facing the trustees is the declining budget in the face of new library technology and services that we want to deliver but which can be costly. We know the citizens of Tompkins County treasure their library and the Board must be sensitive to the needs of people seeking a vibrant and growing library at a reasonable cost to County taxpayers.” Asked what she would change or improve about the library if given unlimited resources and a free hand, Marcy was emphatic in her support of a larger, better collection for the library and the expansion of our dedicated staff to help make it happen. Marcy summarized her role with the Trustees, stating, “The oversight of the operation of the library in a fiscally responsible manner is the key job of Board members.”

What's New at the Library?

Music on Sundays Returns

There will be no shushing in the Ezra Cornell Reading Room one Sunday a month. The room will instead be host to some of the area's finest musicians, as Tompkins County Public Library revives its popular Music on Sundays series.

Music on Sundays gives library patrons the opportunity to enjoy music from an assortment of genres at no charge. Past performers have included Five2, classical guitarist John Bunge, and whistlers Adam Perl and Graham Stewart. This year's series promises to be as exciting!

This series begins on Sunday, September 23 with a performance by Mandin Foli, a musical group made up of Yacouba Diarra and London McDaniel. The musicians play the kora, hand drums, lap steel and nylon stringed-guitars. Part of the Community Read programming for The Pickup, Mandin Foli provides a musical bridge between West African and American music.

Musicians interested in performing at TCPL should contact Carrie Wheeler, public programming and community outreach coordinator, at (607) 272-4557 extension 248.

Teen Summer Reading Program Winner

Reading became a lot more rewarding this summer for seventh-grader Noah Machlur, the grand prize winner of the Tompkins County Public Library's 2007 Teen Summer Reading Program, made possible by a grant to the Tompkins County Public Library Foundation by the J.M. McDonald Foundation.

The Winning Book Review

Abarat, by Clive Barker. Reviewed by Noah Machlur

Life is boring in the town of Chickentown, Minnesota for Candy Quakenbush. Her grades are slipping, she is picked on, her father only cares about his beer, and there is nothing to do. But all that changes when John Mischief comes to town, a strange man with horns that have seven other heads that claim they are his brothers. He (with Candy's help) manages to bring the sea to Chickentown! That is, a sea from another world. Candy gets sucked into a series of adventures in a world called Abarat. Abarat is a chain of 25 islands, one for each hour of the day, plus the mysterious 25th hour! If you're traveling to Babilonium, the island of 8:00 in the morning or to Odoms Spire on the 25th hour, you'll surely find that this book is a wonderful thing to read.

Read more reviews at www.tcpl.org/teen/imoblog/index.html or view the book review binder located in the library's teen area.

Notes on Reading The Pickup

From what we've been hearing from patrons, librarians, Cornell freshman and even Cornell faculty, The Pickup is proving a difficult book to read.

If you're having difficulty getting into the book, here are some suggestions about how to approach the text. Read slowly—this is definitely not a book to “speed read”. Nadine Gordimer has an unusual narrative style. In an interview she explained that she chose not to use standard punctuation. She didn't want the narrator to intrude into the story, but wanted each character to speak for him- or herself. For this reason she omits quotation marks and the narrator does not explain who is talking. The reader must “listen to the words” as he or she reads the text and learn to distinguish the different voices. The slow readers among us have a distinct advantage over the speed-readers!

We urge all of you who have given up to try again. Once you become attuned to Gordimer's style the book flows easily until it becomes difficult to put down.

Booksale: Save These Dates—Oct. 6–8, 13–15, 20–23

The 2007 Fall Booksale is expected to be even bigger than ever, thanks to a donation of over 10,000 books, received from a nearby bookstore that was closing. It looks like this will be a good sale for gift shopping. The Gardening, Cookbooks and Biographies sections report an unusual number of beautiful books in mint condition. For the avid reader who has almost everything, Literary Sets offers a complete set of Bulwer-Lytton (a Victorian author, very popular in his time)—18 volumes and 9,900 pages! In the Children's section there are many more magazines and activity books than usual, including the popular Dover coloring books, Kids Discover and Zoo books. Comics and Paperback Romances also have larger than usual numbers in their popular sections this Fall.

Beryl Barr and Carrie Shearer, Booksale Coordinators, wish to let customers know that this Fall the checking out process will be speeded up with credit card machines at each cashier's station. (However, if it is convenient for you to use cash or a check, this will save the Booksale the credit card fee.)

Two major changes instituted in the spring will be continued. Non-fiction videos will be in their non-fiction book sections (i.e. travel videos in Travel; sports & exercise videos in Sports; history videos in US History, World History, US Presidents, Military History, etc.). Children's short videos are in the Children's section and are priced as Category D. Full length family movies are in the Video Section priced as Category A. Only single volume television shows or movies will be in the video section. Video sets that come pre-packaged with more than 2 dvds/videos will be sold in Collector's Corner. They will be priced lower than would be charged per dvd/video in Category A.

As in the spring, textbooks published in 2002 or after will be sold in a special section during the first weekend of the sale. These textbooks will be priced $20 on Saturday, Oct. 6; $15 on Sunday, Oct. 7; and $10 on Monday, Oct. 8. Any textbooks left, will be returned to their sections for the next weekend. These special textbooks will not be included in the first day 50-book per visit limit.

In addition, we regret that continuing changes in the number of books donated in each section have made necessary more shifts in locations. Maps will be available while you wait in-line or just inside the door. PLEASE CHECK THE MAP BEFORE YOU HEAD TO YOUR FAVORITE SECTIONS!

We look forward to seeing you at the sale!

Local Authors at the Booksale

There is a kind of mystique about Ithaca that makes people want to stay here, or having left, to return. The result is that there are thousands of books whose authors have some connection with Ithaca.

The first group includes very famous people who have had a relatively brief connection with the city. Alex Haley sets some kind of a record in that he was considered enough of an Ithacan to have a local swimming pool named after him, but his family moved away from here shortly after he was born. Pearl Buck lived in the parsonage of the Forest Home Chapel for two years. Others who left Ithaca after attending Cornell included Margaret Bourke-White, and Kurt Vonnegut. Rod Serling lived here for only two years while teaching at Ithaca College, but came often to a nearby summer cottage.

The second group includes those authors who are or were more or less permanent residents. One of the earliest was Grace Miller White who wrote romances set in the Finger Lakes area. Her most famous book "Tess of the Storm Country" was made into four different movie versions. Other local fiction writers include Paul Cody, Brian Hall, Lamar Herrin, Alison Lurie, James McConkey, and Robert Morgan. In the Poetry section, A. R. Ammons is found in 20th Century Poets with a larger than usual selection of his work. In the Local Poets section in Poetry

Local Interest of Special Interest

Bob Chaffee

Although it is one of the smaller sections, some of the most fascinating books at the Booksale are to be found in Local Interest. Bob Chaffee has volunteered at the Booksale since 1986 and has sorted Local Interest since 1991, he also works in the Video section. Bob is employed at Hi-Speed Checkweigher Company. As a part of his interest in local history, he collects high school yearbooks from nearby communities and pre 1950's Ithaca College yearbooks. However, most of his leisure reading is in the

are Katharyn Aal, Diane Ackermann, Walter Beeler, Michelle Berry, Ina Ezerzailis, Wanda Daetsch and Louis Fendrick. In the Gardening section are Diane Ackermann, Dennis Kolva and Elizabeth Sheldon.

Three of the most popular local authors in Childrens are Ruth Gannett & Edward Ormondroyd in Fantasy and David Kirk with his Miss Spider series in picture books. In Children's Classics are the books of Henrick Van Loon, the 1922 winner of the Newbury medal. In the other non-fiction categories, if one includes text books, there are thousands of books by local authors. Probably the best known are Carl Sagan's popular science books.

Originally we had intended to include in this article fiction books written about Tompkins County and books written by Booksale volunteers. However this information will be included as an article in the next issue of the Library Connection because of lack of space. Thanks to all the Booksale workers and community people who helped with this article. Omissions and errors are entirely the responsibility of the author.

Bob has arranged his two bays of Local Interest meticulously, making it easy to find any particular subject. The top three shelves on the right are devoted to Cornell, with yearbooks and oversize books at the top, followed by such books as Morris Bishop's History of Cornell, books by and about Anna Botsford Comstock, the beloved author of nature guides for children, and Liberty Hyde Bailey, long time dean of the School of Agriculture. Other books by Philip Dorf, Cornell chronicler may also be found. Finally, there is a shelf of miscellaneous Cornell items such as guides to the Plantations and the Johnson Museum

The fourth shelf on the right houses a variety of books about New York City. The top shelf on the left contains yearbooks from Ithaca College and N.Y. State high schools and other oversize volumes. The second is devoted to Tompkins County and the next to other specific regions of New York. Next are books about the State as a whole, including history and geography, but not wildlife, geology and plants which go to their respective sections in the rest of the sale.

Near the floor are books by New York authors not connected with Cornell, such as Carl Carmer's delightful stories about New York state and two popular authors who wrote series of books collected from their writings in periodicals. Arch Merrill wrote a local historical column from the 1940's into the 1970's. Ed Eastman, editor of the American Agriculturist wrote, "Eastman's Little Chestnuts". He was the grandfather-in-law of Julie Eastman, who sorts children's picture books.

Local Interest is to be found in Row 13 at the front. Don't miss it!

In Memoriam

August saw the passing of two exceptional women instrumental to the success of the Tompkins County Public Library: Frances A. (Fran) Ramin and Phyllis Brodhead. TCPL couldn't ask for two greater champions than Fran and Phyllis, who as volunteers devoted considerable time and energy, over the course of decades, to the advancement of the library.

Frances A. Ramin

There's little in the world of public libraries in the Finger Lakes region to which Fran Ramin didn't contribute. Her involvement started when she first joined the Friends of the Library nearly 40 years ago, complemented by stints on the Finger Lakes Library System board from 1982 to 1991, Tompkins County Public Library Foundation board from 1995 to 2004 and most recently, the TCPL Advisory Council of which she was a member upon her death.

As a member of the Tompkins County Public Library Foundation board, Fran was part of the team that led The Campaign for the New Library. Fran gave the Foundation board a can-do attitude, particularly in the early years when she helped her colleagues understand the ins and outs of the development process. She always believed that the library could practically sell itself, as long as the pitch was delivered directly, and with grace.

Fran's longest-running association with the library was as part of the Friends of the Library. More than simply a dues-paying member, Fran was an integral part of the effort to build the Friends booksale into one of the biggest and most successful in the country. She was president in 1977 and 1978 and later served as a liaison between the Friends and the Foundation. Fran sorted books in many categories over the years, often with her friend Christina Foltman who initially recruited her on to the board. Chris recalls, "Fran was always upbeat and willing to do whatever was required to get books ready for the sale."

Phyllis Brodhead

An active member of the Tompkins County Public Library Foundation board when she died, a TCPL Trustee for much of the 1980s, and a longtime Friends member, Phyllis Brodhead was devoted to furthering the work of our public library.

She knew firsthand how a library can open up a world of wonder for children, having worked as a librarian at Boynton Middle School for 33 years. She embarked upon this career after raising her family, and tackled it with zeal.

Not content to while away the hours of her retirement, Phyllis became a member the Foundation board in 2005. (In fact, it was Fran Ramin who invited her to join.) She brought the same enthusiasm to learning new skills that she'd shown in her profession, relishing the opportunity to benefit from her fellow board members' expertise.

Phyllis was modest in her assessment of her contributions, yet the legacy of her participation is striking. Her friends and acquaintances couldn't help but get involved as donors, board members and advocates when Phyllis made the case for why the library needed their support.

Phyllis was one of the Foundation team who worked with the Ithaca High School English Media class earlier in 2007 to produce a seven-minute video about the library's impact. Armin Heinrich, the IHS librarian who produced the project, cited Phyllis as one of his professional role models. The students, meanwhile, received from Phyllis firm guidance and steady encouragement.

Fran Ramin and Phyllis Brodhead will be sorely missed, but the lasting effects of their hard work will persist. Each experience of a child discovering the joys of reading for the first time, a group coming together at the library or an adult finding essential information will be a tribute to their years of dedication.

World Languages Board TCAT Buses

If you have ridden on a TCAT bus recently, you may have noticed a new installation highlighting Tompkins County Public Library's world language collection.

Ten 11-by-28 inch placards have been displayed on the buses since July. The color placards were produced and installed by TCAT with a grant made to the Tompkins County Public Library Foundation by the Triad Foundation.

Two placards were created to highlight each of the following languages—Korean, Japanese, Chinese, Russian and Spanish—based on demographic research of the area conducted, in part, by Adult Services Librarian Joyce Wheatley. Wheatley said she believes there has been an increase in usage of the library's world language collection since the installation of the placards, and added that many people new to the area use TCAT as their primary mode of transportation. "The thought was that if people aren't speaking and understanding English, they probably aren't driving," Wheatley said, noting that TCAT was a natural fit for the placard display.

The placards include a message about the availability of world language books at TCPL in the selected language, along with a photograph provided by the Online Computer Library Center, a non-profit, worldwide library cooperative. The message is then repeated in English along with the library's address and website.

The placards will be on display for four months, which includes one month generously donated by TCAT.

For more information about TCPL's world language collection, contact Wheatley at (607) 272-4557 extension 257 or visit <http://www.tcpl.org/reading/booklists.html> for a listing of the collection's new titles.

Adopt a Periodical

In the summer of 2004 the Tompkins County Public Library Foundation launched its first "Adopt a Periodical Campaign", asking our patrons to adopt magazines and newspapers that otherwise would have been dropped from our collection. Through the campaign more than 70 periodicals were adopted for the period 2005 through 2007. This year, the Foundation has again reached out to these donors and many have generously renewed their adoptions through 2010.

Our librarians would like to add new periodicals to the collection, both to replace those no longer in print and to meet the changing needs of our community. The Foundation is therefore asking new donors to come forward to adopt these periodicals for the period 2008 through 2010. A complete list and adoption form, together with full details about each magazine, can be found on our website at www.tcpl.org and in the library. Please help us maintain an attractive, interesting and well-balanced browsing collection of periodicals.
